

Food & Drink Fund Impact Report

2018 – Jan 2026

Since 2018, the Food & Drink Fund has awarded 164 grants to 97 different organisations. In this period the grants totalled £492,653. Included in these figures are 53 Donor Designated grants to 28 different organisations (£210,730 of the total grants given).

The Food & Drink Fund, established in 2018, is made up of a number of generous donor companies, most of whom have strong links to the food and drink industry. It was created to improve health and wellbeing across Suffolk by tackling the root causes of food inequality. By harnessing the power of collective giving, the fund has supported a wide range of local charities and community groups, helping them deliver impactful projects that promote better nutrition and healthier lifestyles across Suffolk.

Grants have focussed on initiatives that support access to nutritious food, encourage healthy cooking and eating habits and raise awareness of food-related health issues – particularly among children and young people. Through this work, the fund continues to make a meaningful difference in communities across the county.

Below we showcase the positive impact made by a few of organisations you have funded in Suffolk over in this period.

The details of individual grants are attached as an addendum to this report with the Donor Designated grants highlighted in green

Case studies

The Food Museum

Across five weeks over the summer holiday the Food Museum, Stowmarket delivered a very popular Thrills and Grills food and cookery programme, with most of the places going to children eligible for free schools meals.

A typical day starts with children being welcomed to the Museum with a food-themed activity (like making kitchen diaries or paper chef hats or a food quiz) and a morning snack. We then head over to the walled garden to harvest fruits, vegetables and flowers to decorate the table and then on to the kitchen for the morning cooking session during which we bake bread and cook an array of delicious dishes. We eat these together outside around a shared table set with flowers and a table cloth.

After lunch we visit places around the Museum to learn more about food and where it comes from, before returning the kitchen to make dishes to take away. We know the programme is really enjoyed by those who take part and the happy faces, clear plates and good feedback is testament to this. Many of the children return for additional sessions and come yearly. In recent years we have found that facilitators from outside the Museum have taken an interest in what we do and we see training others as an area for development and as a way of advocating for food education.

The Befriending Scheme

Zena*, who attends the group, is a lot older than the other parents that attend. She is a grandmother who has found herself having to foster her young granddaughter. Before the group she felt very isolated as having a young child to care for again had altered her way of life - she was not as able to see her old friends or do the things she enjoyed, but was also finding it hard to make friends with the mums at the school because of the age difference. Coming to the group has helped Zena to meet other parents and carers and feel less isolated. She has met up with other parents outside of the group and now has increased her social network and has been able to have some respite by arranging play dates for her granddaughter. She has also improved her cookery skills and is more confident in presenting food to a young child that is both healthy and appealing. In addition Zena has benefitted from chatting to Citizens Advice about other help that is available to her.

Families Together

Thea arrived at Acorn House as a care leaver with hardly any family support and no real role models to lean on. Life had been chaotic – drugs, the police, unhealthy relationships – and becoming a mum wasn't something she ever felt prepared for. When her little boy, Jim, had a serious head injury in 2022 and they were separated for six months while investigations took place, she felt overwhelmed.

With support from Families Together, Thea slowly started building her confidence as a parent. Cooking on a Budget became a turning point. She picked up practical skills she'd never really had the chance to learn – planning meals, batch-cooking, stretching her money further and making healthier choices without spending more. She began chatting with other parents and realised she wasn't as alone as she'd felt. That sense of community made a huge difference.

The impact has been massive. Thea now manages her home life with far more confidence, attends appointments on her own and has completed her life-skills course. She's even been awarded permanent housing, putting her firmly on the path to independence.

Jim is thriving too. His communication and social skills have come on and the routines Thea has built – especially shared mealtimes – have strengthened their bond. The skills she learned are now part of everyday life, helping both of them move towards a much more stable, independent and confident future.

ActivLives

A local family took up a patchwork plot as part of the project. They attend with their young son Rob*, whom they are home-educating - he has autism and ADHD. His younger brother Olly* attends school but also enjoys coming to the community garden.

They were busy picking tomatoes and lettuce for lunch when I went to speak to the parents: "We wanted to take part as a project for Rob, he copes better with life if he's outside. It's given us loads of things to do at home too, writing and reading (related to growing and gardening). We planned out what we wanted to grow and budgeted. We made this whole area ready, digging and clearing all the weeds.

We were given advice on what to plant and what to leave in, plus a few plants and seeds to start us off. We feel part of the community. We chat to others and have met other plot holders. One plot holder gave us a big handful of beans.

It really helps Rob socially, being outdoors helps with everything. It's given him something to talk about. It's really impacted Rob. He was quite down since he left school and his anxiety was bad. He's excited to see what's changed [in the garden] and given him something to look forward to. It helps him sleep, calms his mind. If Rob had his way, he'd never leave the house and this is one sure way to get him out, otherwise, he'd be on computer games all day. He would like to volunteer because if it's a job, he'll do it. Jobs make him feel 'I done that'. Rob - 'That was real fun! This is just like home ed!'

The family had used their produce to make healthy meals - Granny had made curried courgette soup with the enormous courgettes they had grown.

Epic Dad

Samuel*, a dad of four, was juggling part-time work, childcare and the day-to-day pressures of family life while his wife worked full-time. Money was tight, routines were slipping, and keeping everyone well-fed felt like a constant uphill battle for them both. When he first visited the Family Wellbeing Store after hearing about it through EPIC Dad, Samuel was simply hoping for a bit of practical help – but it ended up being a real turning point.

The store gave the family access to fresh, affordable food, plus easy recipe ideas that made cooking feel manageable again. As Samuel kept coming back, he got involved in other EPIC Dad activities too. The Dads and Children's Club gave him precious time with his kids and a chance to connect with other dads, something he didn't realise he'd been missing. One-to-one mentoring offered space to talk honestly about the pressure he was under and helped him build confidence and healthier routines at home.

Samuel now calls the store “a lifeline that helped us reset.” His children are eating better, he feels more capable and connected as a dad, and he’s even encouraging other fathers to join in. The support has helped turn a stretched family’s survival mode into genuine stability.

The Art Station

Before joining the cooking workshops, life in rural Suffolk often felt a bit lonely for Janet* and her young children. With not much happening locally and food costs climbing, finding fun, affordable things to do together was tough. Hearing about the free family cooking sessions through the community fridge, Janet decided to give them a go – and they turned out to be exactly what the family needed.

From the moment they walked in, they felt genuinely welcomed. The sessions were relaxed, friendly and properly inclusive, with people of all ages mucking in and helping each other. What really made an impact was learning how to use surplus food creatively, turning whatever was available into tasty, healthy meals. Cooking together became more than just ‘sorting dinner’ – it became a shared activity that sparked confidence and curiosity. The kids loved getting stuck in, chopping, stirring and proudly tasting what they’d made.

The difference for the family has been “massive.” The workshops lifted Janet’s mood, eased stress and helped them feel more connected – both to each other and to the wider community. In a place where not much usually happens, the sessions offered fun, support, and new friendships. Asked if they’d return, the answer was easy: “Yes – because it was fun and helpful.”
